Good Idea!

Pint-Size Kitchen

Contemplated State Sanitary Codes suggest that all camp infirmaries should have their own kitchens. A pullman kitchen, which is extremely complete, and only takes up eight square feet, is available. It saves a room and the necessity of building an addition onto the infirmary.

The kitchen occupies a space, 4' x 2'. It contains a four burner stove, a full sized oven, a 4½ cubic foot ice box, a Monel metal sink, and shelves with plenty of storage space for dishes, pots, pans and canned goods and fruit storage. The kitchen is available for electricity or "canned" gas.

Infirmary dishes can be kept by themselves and washed separately. Special diets can be prepared. The refrigerator is large enough for storage of all kinds of medication, cold juices, etc. It also has three trays for ice cubes.

This kitchen is so compact it can be set into any corner or recessed into the wall of any room. Closed, it can be part of the wall. The kitchen is self ventilated and no odors, heat or vapors escape into the room. After using it for one summer at camp, all of us have wondered how we ever got along without it.

Craftshop Cleaners

To make ideal bench brooms in the crafts shop which will help keep down the mess to a minimum, cut out the least worn part of your worn-out floor brushes and insert a new handle.

Swelled Heads

Before the start of the camp season be sure to swell your axe and hammer handles on their heads. During the winter they become dried out and shrink away from the head, with the result that the head may fly off and injure someone seriously if this hazard is not guarded against by proper swelling.
